12. What are the estimated costs of compliance for all persons and/or organizations directly affected by the rule?

Each CAFF must obtain either a permit to install or a permit to operate. The fees for these permits can be found in OAC Rule 901:10-1-04 (Fees) and vary from $500 to $3,000 as proposed. All manure storage and treatment structures owned or otherwise controlled by a CAFF must be constructed in compliance with the standards set forth in rule. The Department's engineers will conduct quality assurance inspections during construction to ensure facilities are constructed in compliance. The Department's inspectors will conduct routine inspections of CAFFs to ensure facilities are operation in compliance. Facility characteristics (i.e., animal species, location, whether managing solid or liquid manure, whether utilizing earthen or fabricated structures, etc.) may dictate that additional operational requirements or control measures are needed to maintain compliance. Extensive geological exploration is required to determine if soil and ground water characteristics at the site are adequate for any manure storage or treatment structures proposed and provide the applicant with the information necessary to most efficiently plan where these structures can be installed. The cost of the permits required by these rules will vary widely based on the facility characteristics, the geological setting, and if an independent contractor(s) is hired to develop these permits.

The fees are set forth in OAC 901:10-1-04 and in accordance with ORC 903.19, the funds are deposited in the livestock management fund and are used solely to administer the division.
