12. What are the estimated costs of compliance for all persons and/or organizations directly affected by the rule?

This rule identifies test methods to be used to demonstrate compliance for sources of VOC. This rule does not specifically require the testing, the rule provides information on the methods to use when testing is required elsewhere in this chapter.

For facilities performing a compliance test per this rule, an intent to test notification and final test report are required to be submitted. The cost of providing this notification is estimated to be a few hundred to a thousand dollars depending on the number of tests being performed and number of emission units being tested. This cost consists of labor charges to collect and prepare the required information for the notification.

This rule has been in effect for 40+ years. All costs associated with compliance with the existing requirements of this rule have been well established in industry. The amendments being made to this rule do not add any additional requirements to affected facilities. As such, there is no additional cost of compliance associated with the amendments being made to this rule.

13. Does the rule increase local government costs? (If yes, you must complete an RSFA Part B). No

14. Does the rule regulate environmental protection? (If yes, you must complete an RSFA Part C). Yes
